

THE PURPOSE AND ASSUMPTIONS OF
THE 2023 ECONOMIC IMPACT ANALYSIS
(EIA)

The 412th Comptroller Squadron at Edwards Air Force Base prepares an annual economic impact analysis to determine the total economic impact of the base on its surrounding communities. This statement is compiled from data collected during fiscal year 2023 – from October 2022 through September 2023.

This analysis presents the most current information about Edwards AFB organizations, force structure, capital assets and other aspects of the base. It aids Air Force planners in allocation of resources and serves as a guide for community leaders, legislators and installation visitors to better articulate the fiscal impact of the base on the Antelope Valley.

Edwards identifies its primary area of economic influence as a 75-mile radius surrounding the base and is comprised of those communities that house the majority of base employees.

Edwards sits at the convergence of three counties – Los Angeles, Kern and San Bernardino. Most base workers live in Lancaster and Palmdale within L.A. County; Rosamond, Edwards AFB, California City and Tehachapi within Kern County; or Victorville within San Bernardino County. Other population centers affected by this economic impact analysis include North Edwards, Boron, Mojave, Quartz Hill, Acton, Littlerock and Santa Clarita.

FY 2023 EIA SUMMARY:

Edwards AFB has an annual economic impact on the local area of at least $3.10 billion. The base's annual payroll is approximately $874 million, its expenditures totaled approximately $1.4 billion, and it adds approximately 11,570 indirect jobs to the area, valued at approximately $805 million per fiscal year.
